REQUIREMENT

Anatomy & Physiology

6-8 Credit Hours

GW requires that 6-8 credit hours be completed within the area of Anatomy and Physiology. Some colleges structure these courses as Anatomy & Physiology I and II, while others split them into one individual class in Anatomy and one individual class in Physiology. Both formats are acceptable as long as the combined credit hours equal 6-8.

Microbiology

The Microbiology requirement can be fulfilled by any course that is centered on fundamental Microbiology. The course should be broad and cover the basic components of the topic (i.e. General Microbiology).

Statistics

3 Credits

The prerequisite in Statistics can be fulfilled by any class that centers on statistics within the general course content. This does not necessarily have to be a math class, but can also be a scientific course that focuses on statistical research methods (or similar formats).

Nutrition

3 Credits

This requirement should be fulfilled by a general Nutrition class, which broadly covers the fundamentals. Variants of this topic can be acceptable (i.e. Nutrition and Lifestyle), but any such class should be confirmed with the Admissions office.

Ethics

3 Credits

The Ethics requirement can be fulfilled by a variety of classes/subjects. Theology or Philosophy courses that center are on Ethics are acceptable as is any other ethically-themed course. All classes should be confirmed with the Admissions Office.
